

Governance - since 1996

- Since 1996, we applied our “Integrity Screen” on Indian companies— now known as “Governance”.
- Quantum’s Integrity Screen has helped sift out companies with questionable business and governance practices.
- Prior to investing in a company, the research and portfolio team analyses Corporate Governance (the Board and Key Management Personnel), historical track record in protecting minority shareholder interest, business practices and care for the community (other stakeholders).
- We do not invest in companies if they fail our Integrity Screen checks - even if valuations are attractive and/or these stocks are market favourites.

Proprietary ESG Database

- When we asked external agencies for sample ESG ratings of some of well-known Indian companies, we realized that attention was paid more to quantitative disclosure than qualitative assessment of the disclosures. The methodology lacked rigor. Overall ratings were suspect.
- Quantum started building an internal ESG Team in 2015.
- Screening based on international ESG standards (UN Global Compact, PRI) and incorporating our learnings from assessing corporate behavior in India since 1990.
- Our process has evolved over last few years, as we travel up the learning curve and established a principles-based, qualitative-oriented, ESG framework.

Investment Objective: The Q India Responsible Returns Strategy is a valuation agnostic portfolio built on the principles of Governance and Sustainability. The objective is to build a diversified portfolio using Quantum's proprietary ESG scores to determine weights, subject to sector guardrails. The portfolio typically owns 40 to 60 publicly listed stocks — each of which trade an average of USD 1 mn per day over the past 1 year, with the aim to have a liquid portfolio. The strategy endeavors to remain fully invested in the robust ESG compliant companies and cash will generally be less than 5% of the portfolio.
